

American Decency Association

PO Box 202, Fremont, MI 49412 231-924-4050 www.americandecency.org

Encouraging Christians to guard their hearts

December 2009

Is there a movement under way to silence Christians?

Over the past year, we have observed many concerning changes taking place in our nation, especially in the area of government. Even as any semblance of morals we maintain is stomped on and ridiculed, Christian liberty is being attacked and suppressed on a variety of fronts.

Not only is Christianity being undermined, but our very government, birthed from Christian roots and precepts, whose own constitution lists the free exercise of religion as the first protected freedom, is now being used to silence Christianity within the public square. To put it bluntly, the original shapers of our founding documents, known as the greatest governmental charter in political history, would not recognize America.

Unfortunately, many believers have no idea of the battles that are still fought over religious liberty. In his book, Speechless: Silencing the Christians, Don Wildmon lays out exactly how and where the religious freedom of Christians is being challenged.

As founder and chairman of the American Family Association, Rev. Wildmon has much experience in defending Christian principles. His book gives example after example of cases being fought over the freedom of Christians to express their beliefs. As the book affirms, the attack on the Christian religion is not outright or blatant, and that is what makes it so deadly.

Quoting: “One reason many Christians took no notice even while the culture war was erupting all around them is that the [liberal secularists and homosexual activists] always frame their first moves in the same way: they claim to be asking for nothing more than tolerance, which is the American way. But this claim is untrue, on two counts.

“They want a lot more than tolerance: they want our government and our culture to actively endorse, affirm, and support their worldview and their lifestyle. And to get that affirmation, they need us out of the way. They can’t tolerate us; tolerance won’t get them where they want to go.

“Just look at the struggle over the First Amendment during the past several decades. Often this struggle is portrayed as some sort of “lawyers’ technical argument” over the actual words and meaning of the amendment. The truth is nearly the opposite. The homosecularists’ real goal is to use the First Amendment as their weapon. Then, with the power of the government behind them, they can promote and enforce their values to ostracize Christians.

“Here’s what I mean. Pornography, which was pretty difficult to find in this country a couple of generations ago, is everywhere, thanks to secularist liberal lobbying and the courts.”

[continued on reverse side]

American Decency Association

PO Box 202, Fremont, MI 49412 231-924-4050 www.americandecency.org

Encouraging Christians to guard their hearts

December 2009

Is there a movement under way to silence Christians?

Over the past year, we have observed many concerning changes taking place in our nation, especially in the area of government. Even as any semblance of morals we maintain is stomped on and ridiculed, Christian liberty is being attacked and suppressed on a variety of fronts.

Not only is Christianity being undermined, but our very government, birthed from Christian roots and precepts, whose own constitution lists the free exercise of religion as the first protected freedom, is now being used to silence Christianity within the public square. To put it bluntly, the original shapers of our founding documents, known as the greatest governmental charter in political history, would not recognize America.

Unfortunately, many believers have no idea of the battles that are still fought over religious liberty. In his book, Speechless: Silencing the Christians, Don Wildmon lays out exactly how and where the religious freedom of Christians is being challenged.

As founder and chairman of the American Family Association, Rev. Wildmon has much experience in defending Christian principles. His book gives example after example of cases being fought over the freedom of Christians to express their beliefs. As the book affirms, the attack on the Christian religion is not outright or blatant, and that is what makes it so deadly.

Quoting: “One reason many Christians took no notice even while the culture war was erupting all around them is that the [liberal secularists and homosexual activists] always frame their first moves in the same way: they claim to be asking for nothing more than tolerance, which is the American way. But this claim is untrue, on two counts.

“They want a lot more than tolerance: they want our government and our culture to actively endorse, affirm, and support their worldview and their lifestyle. And to get that affirmation, they need us out of the way. They can’t tolerate us; tolerance won’t get them where they want to go.

“Just look at the struggle over the First Amendment during the past several decades. Often this struggle is portrayed as some sort of “lawyers’ technical argument” over the actual words and meaning of the amendment. The truth is nearly the opposite. The homosecularists’ real goal is to use the First Amendment as their weapon. Then, with the power of the government behind them, they can promote and enforce their values to ostracize Christians.

“Here’s what I mean. Pornography, which was pretty difficult to find in this country a couple of generations ago, is everywhere, thanks to secularist liberal lobbying and the courts.”

[continued on reverse side]

Is there a movement under way to silence (cont. from page 1)

(I have been fighting it since Hugh Hefner's Playboy, which some people now consider to be relatively innocent. First lesson: don't let the camel get his nose in the tent.) Any serious attempt to legally restrict pornography -- even just enough to protect minors -- has been thwarted by the courts and the ever-vigilant American Civil Liberties Union and its allies. They say that protecting children is the parents' job and that it's "against the First Amendment" for government to help, as if parents alone could fight off the constant bombardment of smut being thrust at them all the time.

In other words: under the secularist liberal worldview the government must protect pornographers' freedom of expression but must not help parents protect their children from pornography. The secular liberals will say children are important. But when it's time to choose, they side with the pornograph-

ers. ...

It is not the devotion of secular liberals to the First Amendment that compels them to defend pornography. Just the opposite. Their devotion to sexual liberty compels them to distort the First Amendment beyond recognition.

... The advocates of the sexual revolution constantly declaimed, "Sex is a private matter" by which they meant, "Christians, butt out. What we do in the privacy of our bedrooms is none of your business." But ... in many ways sex is a very public matter. Catastrophic divorce rates and fatherless children are a very public matter. Even further, the pornographic culture in which our marriages struggle and in which we try to raise our children is a very public matter. And as we are now being reminded, the very definition of marriage is a very public matter, which homosexual groups are trying to change radically, all the while claiming that all they really want is "tolerance." ...

The sexual liberals, especially homosexual activists and their allies, crave public approval. And they are perfectly willing to use the power of government, and even persecute Christians, to get it. ...

The secularists define "sexual liberty" as sexual, moral, and political affirmation. They have defined the battle as winner-take-all. It is they who have decided that their version of sexual liberty cannot coexist with real Christianity.

And right now the momentum is on the side of the homosecuarist elite. They have succeeded in perverting the original meaning of our founding documents. Laws written to protect religious liberty are now used to suppress it. Christians are forced not only to accept homosexual behavior but also to actively support and encourage it, while the homosecuarists deploy a strategy of legal maneuvers, political intimidation, and government-funded propaganda to discredit Christianity at every level of society.

This is a battle for the future.

Taken from: Speechless: Silencing the Christians by Rev. Donald E. Wildmon. For ordering information go to <https://store.afa.net/>

Is there a movement under way to silence (cont. from page 1)

(I have been fighting it since Hugh Hefner's Playboy, which some people now consider to be relatively innocent. First lesson: don't let the camel get his nose in the tent.) Any serious attempt to legally restrict pornography -- even just enough to protect minors -- has been thwarted by the courts and the ever-vigilant American Civil Liberties Union and its allies. They say that protecting children is the parents' job and that it's "against the First Amendment" for government to help, as if parents alone could fight off the constant bombardment of smut being thrust at them all the time.

In other words: under the secularist liberal worldview the government must protect pornographers' freedom of expression but must not help parents protect their children from pornography. The secular liberals will say children are important. But when it's time to choose, they side with the pornograph-

ers. ...

It is not the devotion of secular liberals to the First Amendment that compels them to defend pornography. Just the opposite. Their devotion to sexual liberty compels them to distort the First Amendment beyond recognition.

... The advocates of the sexual revolution constantly declaimed, "Sex is a private matter" by which they meant, "Christians, butt out. What we do in the privacy of our bedrooms is none of your business." But ... in many ways sex is a very public matter. Catastrophic divorce rates and fatherless children are a very public matter. Even further, the pornographic culture in which our marriages struggle and in which we try to raise our children is a very public matter. And as we are now being reminded, the very definition of marriage is a very public matter, which homosexual groups are trying to change radically, all the while claiming that all they really want is "tolerance." ...

The sexual liberals, especially homosexual activists and their allies, crave public approval. And they are perfectly willing to use the power of government, and even persecute Christians, to get it. ...

The secularists define "sexual liberty" as sexual, moral, and political affirmation. They have defined the battle as winner-take-all. It is they who have decided that their version of sexual liberty cannot coexist with real Christianity.

And right now the momentum is on the side of the homosecuarist elite. They have succeeded in perverting the original meaning of our founding documents. Laws written to protect religious liberty are now used to suppress it. Christians are forced not only to accept homosexual behavior but also to actively support and encourage it, while the homosecuarists deploy a strategy of legal maneuvers, political intimidation, and government-funded propaganda to discredit Christianity at every level of society.

This is a battle for the future.

Taken from: Speechless: Silencing the Christians by Rev. Donald E. Wildmon. For ordering information go to <https://store.afa.net/>