

New World Order is Old Time Tyranny

By Lisa Van Houten

As gas prices skyrocket, Americans are paying the price – but not just at the pump. The high cost of fuel contributes to the cost of everything else escalating. Gas prices double what they were when Biden took office; a foolhardy, prolonged shutdown of the economy which didn't stop Covid, but certainly stopped the supply chain; and soaring inflation, rising 8% in February alone and higher than it's been in 40 years – has caused a trifecta of misery for American families. And it's projected to only get worse.

Many experts are warning of a coming global famine. Food prices are up 20% from just one year ago. Ukraine, considered one of the most important “breadbaskets” of the world, is a leading exporter of wheat, barley, and corn to the Mideast, Africa, and Europe – supplying these regions with up to 60% of their grain food sources. As the war in Ukraine is prolonged, how much crop planting will occur this spring? In the U.S., we're reliant on China and Russia for much of the fertilizer farmers need and costs have gone through the roof as the supply has plummeted. One Michigan farmer stated: “Fertilizer has doubled in price and we don't even know if we can get what we need.” A Texan farmer tweeted: “...fertilizer is up 200% ... most herbicides/insecticides up 100%, seed up 20%, diesel and gasoline up 300%. My cost per acre in 2020 was around $700, this year $1300.” The prices farmers are forced to pay to produce our food, and the cost truckers must pay to haul it, will have to be passed on to the retailer, and then the consumer.

At least Bill Clinton once said, “I feel your pain.” President Biden shows neither concern nor responsibility for the mess his administration has caused. Rather, he blames Putin, “greedy” corporations, the oil industry, and of course Trump. Yet the American people see through Biden's deflection, reflected in his plummeting poll numbers. Biden dismissively stated about gas prices: “It's gonna go up. Can't do much right now, Russia's responsible.” Not only is that tone-deaf to the plight of Americans, it's also a bold face lie. Biden's own policies, crippling our energy industry, caused prices to rise long before Russia threatened Ukraine.

Even though the U.S. sits on a vast treasure trove of oil, instead of opening up production we're told by Biden officials to just go buy an electric vehicle to avoid higher gas prices – the average cost of which exceeds $55,000 - more than the yearly salary for millions of Americans. Energy Secretary Jennifer Granholm, never letting a good crisis go to waste (a crisis of their own making), said the conflict in Ukraine “creates a moment” to transition to “clean” energy. Leftist media elites are condescendingly telling us peasants how to deal with inflation, offering advice such as “sell your car and take the bus” and “eat lentils instead of meat.” Do they think we all live in urban areas? They seem to forget that public transportation isn't even an option for most Americans. And while they order their juicy steaks from Uber Eats, we “unwashed masses” should just get used to living on rice and beans.

To Biden and the Left, escalating gas and food prices are not a problem to be solved, but a means to an end. And that goal isn't to protect the environment. The actual goal is to concentrate power and resources into the hands of a global ruling class. Recently Joe Biden stated in a speech before the Business Roundtable: “Now is the time where things are shifting. There's going to be a new world order out there and we've got to lead it.” For years leftist elites in the U.S. and in global institutions such as the World Economic Forum, the U.N., and the World Bank have talked repeatedly about instituting a “new world order” and the need for a “great reset.” This New World Order seeks to undermine individual sovereignty, the Constitution, capitalism, private property – to be replaced with a global system run by these elites. Covid lockdowns conditioned many people to willingly give up their freedom. Private property is increasingly consolidated among the rich and powerful; for example Bill Gates is the largest

Personal Note from the President

In recent days, I have noticed that people have been searching our website for updated information regarding our deceased friend Philip B. Haney, known for his testimony as a DHS whistleblower, author of the book, "See Something, Say Nothing," and repeat guest not only of our organization, but of conservative media hosts like Glenn Beck. Our last article commemorating our friend's approaching anniversary of death, written 1-21-22, may have reignited our readers' interest.

Several days ago, I received documents from a very close friend of Phil Haney reporting that Phil, rather than being murdered as so many of us believed, committed suicide. The article followed the release of the FBI report. <https://tinyurl.com/4wk5z534> Similarly, an article from Philip's hometown newspaper can be found at: <https://tinyurl.com/3smdn9p9> Knowing that many people are looking for an update on Phil (and that many had been to one of the many events that we had with Philip), I decided to do what I could do to be another voice into our heart-wrenching loss.

Amidst the vast amount of material in the 278 page FBI report is Philip's alleged suicide letter - just recently released. On page 167 is this handwritten letter by Phil, which I've shortened here due to space limitations. I know no one who knows me will understand why. I took my own life. But, there are good reasons. I've been known as an over-comer and a Fighter, and I was. I've been known as a Lover of Beauty, Life & Nature & I was. As a lover of Israel & the Covenant & I was. Lover of Music and Song and I was.

There are sometimes hard choices in life, when there are no other options but one.

FAMILY NAMES - REDACTED BY ME, I loved you, too. ... FAMILY NAMES - REDACTED BY ME, you were part of my life too, with love.

The thumb drives in the small cloth bag behind the computer should go to COLLEAGUE REDACTED BY ME

With great sadness, I must say - many of us have lost trust in the FBI. Many questions arise. One of mine being: why did it take two years to go public with Phil's letter? As you might well imagine, Philip's family has many, many questions and the two-year delay and the reports coming out of it renew the heartache, anger, and anguish regarding the years of silence and the conclusions drawn. They unequivocally dismiss the FBI's conclusion.

I have had a couple of conversations with people who have their views on what happened to Phil. Also, I feel that I knew Phil quite well but, of course, not as well as his family. American Decency hosted Phil in Michigan for over a month and had him in and out of our state on a couple of other occasions. In addition, I had numerous phone conversations with him over a couple of years, when he confided things to me as a friend. I, as many of you, read his book "See Something. Say Nothing." In my various times on the road, Phil and I had compelling conversations. As you might imagine, we talked about personal situations and concerns. I was attentive to interviews that Philip did on The Sean Hannity Radio Show, Frank Gaffney's Secure Freedom Radio, and on mainstream media interviews.

In my last conversation with Phil in late December 2019, Phil told me that he was leaving his work (speaking, testifying, etc) after years of laying his life on the line and going to take on his love for music - composing spiritual songs messaging spiritual encouragements. We had seen this side of him in our headquarters and home as he took out his guitar and sang sweet spiritual songs - off the cuff - at least it seemed that way. Then, within weeks, I heard from one of his close friends that he might have an opportunity to get back into the work in the Trump Administration. I heard later that door shut almost as quickly as it appeared open. He also faced a significant heart surgery in the weeks ahead. Intermix all of this with the fact that his beloved wife Francesca had died in recent months. (2/5/2019)

So, what happened to Philip B. Haney? The FBI reports that it was a suicide. Family and loved ones have said "no way" while others who were close to him say that, with all that this American hero had endured for years and was going through at the time of his death, suicide is a possibility. The alleged suicide note outlining so much detail is very powerful, but questions exist from family members regarding aspects of the handwriting.

As I bring this piece to a conclusion, I want to share one particular recollection. In mid June of 2018, on Phil's first stop on his month-long speaking tour with us, at a Sunday School session, he chose to speak on the subject of the Holy Spirit. There were no notes. No Power Point. Just straight out proclaiming God's Word on the Holy Spirit. I was amazed at his Biblical knowledge and the proper handling of the word of God. That message told me right up front that Philip was a man of God with a deep personal relationship with His Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Many conversations with him made it abundantly clear that he had been able to stand against the forces of evil as long as he had because he was firmly and securely and personally committed to bringing glory and honor to Jesus Christ. How else could he have overcome the darkness of the Muslim Brotherhood, ISIS, the tainted, long term scrutiny of the FBI, and the Obama administration which he served under in his high position with the Department of Homeland Security? They tried to take him down and they couldn't.

What happened to Philip B. Haney on that fateful day, February 21, 2020? Only the Lord knows for sure. Lest you expect me to dodge the issue, I step into it recognizing my own frailties. Can I say without a doubt that Phil did not take his life? No I can't but Over the last several days I've had discussions with others who knew Phil and have examined the FBI report, yet also recognize that Phil was just a man like any of

Who Can Say What Anything Is Really?

By Chris Johnson

I'm not an NCAA Swimming Rule expert, which, as we shall see later on, might disqualify anything I might have to say on NCAA swimming, but I do find it remarkable when an athlete jumps from being ranked 554th in the nation to fifth in one event, from 32nd to eighth in another, and 65th to first in the whole country in one season.

And what did this athlete do to achieve these remarkable improvements? Find a new coach? Push their training to the next level? No, William Thomas shortened his name to Lia and began competing against girls.

Having completed the one year of testosterone suppression treatment required by the NCAA, the transgender athlete was welcomed to the University of Pennsylvania's women's swim team, warmly by the coach, if not so much by his new female team mates. To make "Lia" feel welcome, you see, he was allowed to use the same locker room as the rest of the women's team, and at same time. One team mate explained to the DailyMail.com why that was so uncomfortable: "It's definitely awkward because Lia still has male body parts and is still attracted to women..."

The DailyMail.com's interview with the swimmer also revealed that, "Multiple swimmers have raised [the concern], multiple different times. But we were basically told that we could not ostracize Lia by not having her in the locker room and that there's nothing we can do about it, that we basically have to roll over and accept it, or we cannot use our own locker room."

"It's really upsetting because Lia doesn't seem to care how it makes anyone else feel," the swimmer continued. "The 35 of us are just supposed to accept being uncomfortable in our own space and locker room for,

like, the feelings of one."

Indeed, as the country has watched these competitions and debated the fairness of the competitions, due to Thomas' physical advantages and differences (which do not disappear with hormone therapy), the central issue is that Thomas claims to be a woman in spite of all evidence to the contrary. And, unbelievably, his teammates are subjected to that evidence at every meet.

Perhaps they would feel qualified to answer the question recently posed to Supreme Court Nominee Ketanji Brown Jackson: "Can you provide a definition for the word 'woman'?" "No, I can't," the judge responded before further explaining, "Not in this context, I'm not a biologist."

What's interesting is that this argument popped up only days before in the stands of the NCAA women's swim competition. National Review reporter Madeleine Kearns shared a video on her Twitter account of a trans-activist arguing with an attendee about whether or not "Lia" Thomas was qualified to compete. On being informed that she was not qualified to judge the situation because she was not a biologist, the attendee replied, "I'm not a vet, but I know what a dog is."

Similarly, William Thomas' teammates know what they're looking at in the locker room, and the idea that you have to be an expert for your opinion to matter on something so trivial is patently ridiculous.

Even outside the locker room, the evidence is stark. A sycophantic Sports Illustrated write-up of Thomas breathlessly exclaims: "In her first year swimming for the Penn women's team after three seasons competing against men, Thomas throttled her competition. She set pool, school and Ivy League records en route to becoming the nation's most powerful female collegiate swimmer."

In spite of this the article is shamelessly slanted against those who recognize the issue, even while noting their citation of "alleged" scientific evidence that males, even after hormone therapy, have "larger hands and feet, bigger hearts and greater bone density and lung capacity."

You know, it's funny that this debate would take place during a Supreme Court Nomination hearing, and that the candidate would be asked such a question, and that the obtuse answer given would be such a boon for the once-radical left.

After all, it was less than four years ago that Donald Trump nominated Brett Kavanaugh to the Supreme Court, in the midst of a controversy targeted towards Trump himself in the form of the #BelieveAllWomen campaign. In the midst of the Kavanaugh hearings, the candidate was famously accused of a brutal sexual assault on a teenager by an old acquaintance who had never told anyone about it and could remember precisely zero verifiable details.

Now, those who would have had us believe Ms. Ford only on the veracity of that campaign's momentum cannot even define what a woman is.

And remember, we're talking about an Ivy League institution and a potential Supreme Court Justice. The most educated people in the country cannot define a woman, and it's not because of the discovery of new data in the past several decades. It's either genuine confusion due to a shift in ideology or capitulating to political pressure and no matter which, it does not bode well for the culture they are positioned to shape.

As a society, we have rejected God's authority to tell us what His creations are and what they are for, claiming that right for ourselves. As we see here, without His absolute authority to appeal to, our attempts to manipulate reality for our own benefit will only be used to abuse others.

In the midst of this top-down confusion, Christians must not fear the social reprisal of speaking the truth. God made men and women in His image, for His purpose. The only way our culture will ever become sane again is if Christ's church reminds them what that is.

You don't have to be a biologist to define a woman, or a veterinarian to know what a dog is. You just have to be willing to accept reality as God has created it rather than trying to refashion it into your own image.

owner of farmland in the United States, allowing him to control what food is – or isn't – grown. The International Energy Agency is calling for energy lockdowns, such as banning the use of cars in cities on Sundays and other restrictions on movement, just as we saw with Covid. Yet those who warn of these globalist goals are called crazy conspiracy theorists, even as these so-called "conspiracy theories" keep coming true.

Thirty years ago, in 1992, the U.N. Agenda 21 was developed as a "comprehensive blueprint for the reorganization of human society." This 350-page document was very explicit in its goals. It called for the lowering of the standard of living for Americans, re-distribution of wealth, government control of property, energy, production, information. In essence, the policies of Agenda 21 would affect every aspect of life - controlling what we eat, what products we can buy, where we work and where and how we travel – using the supposed threat of an environmental crisis to convince people to willingly surrender freedom (just as was done with Covid). When this plan was introduced in 1992, UN leadership proclaimed, "Current lifestyles and consumption patterns of the affluent middle class – involving meat intake, use of fossil fuels, appliances, air-conditioning, and suburban housing – are not sustainable." Agenda 21 stated that national sovereignty would "yield" to "new imperatives of global environmental cooperation."

Thirty years ago, those who expressed alarm about Agenda 21 were also labeled conspiracy theorists. Yet when you read the plan Agenda 21 sought to implement, it is eerily similar to what we see being pushed down our throats today – everything from replacing meat with lentils to eliminating fossil fuels – while power and control is concentrated among the wealthy elites, making us peasants to the ruling class. Today it's called the Great Reset or New World Order – different name, same plan.

It's a pretty bleak picture. Yet while man schemes, the Sovereign Lord is unfolding His plan – a true New World Order where there will be a new heaven and a new earth, where righteousness will reign. In the meantime, God is upholding His people and the Church's marching orders remain the same – proclaim the Good News of the Gospel. As turmoil increases, so will our opportunities to minister in Jesus' name.

us. However, what marked Phil above most of us was the years of demonstrated character against powerful forces at the highest levels and this ability to stand against the wiles of the devil; to hold fast to what was good; to hold every thought captive; to hold fast to his constitutional oath, his pledges, his word. Many have heard him in person or in a recorded message before large audiences and in one on one conversations say: "If you hear that I committed suicide, don't believe it!" He was fully aware that he had many enemies from without and within the country. Again, only God knows! Phil Haney paid a great price - day after day for many years - fighting for freedom for America and for the American people that he loved. Has anyone fought harder or more boldly with greater expertise rooting out enemies of our nation than this American patriot and Christian?

In closing, Philip Haney finished nearly every message that he gave with the following quote from Abraham Lincoln: "The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present. The occasion is piled high with difficulty, and we must rise with the occasion. As our case is new, so we must think anew, and act anew. We must disenthrall ourselves, and then we shall save our country." (DISENTHRALL: to free from a controlling force or influence)

Here's one of my favorite recordings from our times with Phil Haney. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=osIe-t0onKk> A very close friend of Phil's urged me to include one last thing: Please pray for Phil's family - his brothers, sisters and daughter.

"And the people served the Lord all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that outlived Joshua, who had seen all the great works of the Lord, that he did for Israel. And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the Lord, died, being an hundred and ten years old. ... And also all that generation were gathered unto their fathers: and there arose another generation after them, which knew not the Lord, nor yet the works which he had done for Israel." ~ Judges 2:7-8, 10

Phil Haney served the Lord! God prepared Him in unique ways from humble beginnings, in and through difficult battles from within and without. In his days on earth, Philip was not oblivious to the reality that there was much at stake in fighting for truth and righteousness. Even to the end he was still desirous of getting back into the fray. Phil has been gone two years now. Already wickedness has expanded exponentially. The battle is the Lord's and we are His workmanship. God will strengthen us and renew us daily as we look to Him and Him alone!

Resist the Biosecurity Surveillance State

By Steve Huston

We are being lulled into a trap!

Do you recall the Biblical account of Joshua during the second battle of Ai? The Israelites sounded retreat, luring the enemy into a false sense of security, only to attack and destroy the unsuspecting warriors of Ai. This is what the Leftists are doing to us; they feign retreat by rolling back mask and vaccine mandates/passports, but are only regrouping, renaming, and getting ready to remove the liberties we hold so dear and which our Constitution is meant to protect. Don't be fooled; even when they "retreat" they are preparing to ambush. Even when they lose, they are planning their next attack. Seemingly, only those on the Right are satisfied with a "victory" and, in that, rest on their laurels, believing that now everything is okay. If the Leftists have their way Americans will find themselves in a totalitarian state and conservatives will become second-class citizens. We must not rest; we must remain vigilant, prayerful, and resistant to anything that attacks America's sovereignty and Americans' freedoms.

Have you noticed how "vaccine passports" are no longer being shoved down our throats? Now they are being called "smart health cards," but this rose by any other name still stinks of control; and they're being marketed as a convenience. (We're told the same thing about digital currency.) After all, for decades we've been conditioned to believe that if it's more convenient it's better. We're expected to NOT question whether it's truly more convenient and if we're told that something is for our health or the safety of others, even at the cost of relinquishing our liberties, unquestioning compliance is the only action that shows civility. Do you love freedom enough to be "uncivilized?"

What is a biosecurity surveillance state and what dangers could it pose? Perhaps it's best described as a state where monitoring and surveillance is a way of life, giving the state a 360° digital view of the individual, whereby using the gathered information to control both the individual and society. For an example of this we need only understand how the CCP (Chinese Communist Party) monitors and uses surveillance on its own citizens to determine where they fit in the social credit system.

What goes into this 360° digital view? Facial recognition, real time geo-location, tracking all social media posts, internet search history, internet spending history, criminal history, medical history, where you work and live, your credit card and bank accounts, and your COVID status. From all this they assign you a social credit score. If your score is higher you get more privileges, like travel, keep your job, get your child in a good school, borrow money. What we know as rights they consider privileges; if you're score is lower your rights dwindle. This is not freedom or equality; this is tyranny and arbitrary positioning. If your score drops too low they could freeze your credit card or even "disappear you."

Hmm, I think I just heard someone mumble, "That's China; it could never happen here." Yes, that is China; but it can happen in the West too. We're actually much closer than most people think; and if we don't resist, that will be our plight. Frank Gaffney recently (3/21/22) interviewed Reggie Littlejohn, who warned, "Tech experts say the same functionality that comprises the China social credit system can be attached to these vaccine passports (digital apps on your phone)...in a matter of minutes." And according to Frank Gaffney some governors, including Republican governors, are helping to advance, or at least they're not opposing, the institution of these so-called smart health cards.

With an Epoch Times article that informs us that "The Department of Homeland Security has been collecting Americans' financial records in bulk under its financial surveillance program," no one should find it far-fetched to believe that the implementation of the CCP social credit system would shortly follow the coerced use of smart health card apps or some similar biodigital implantation.

There are others who give this warning as well. Read this excerpt from Aaron Kheriaty's much larger article entitled, "The Rising Biosecurity Surveillance Regime."

With vaccine mandates and passports, we are seeing the emergence of a new biosecurity surveillance regime designed and implemented by unelected technocrats. The unholy welding of digital technologies, public health, and police power is leading to unprecedented invasions on our privacy and intrusive methods of monitoring and authoritarian control. In this framework, citizens are no longer viewed as persons with inherent dignity, but as fungible elements of an undifferentiated "mass," to be shaped by supposedly benevolent health and safety experts. I predict that if these trends do not meet more robust resistance in 2022, this new paradigm of governance will demand increasingly intrusive and burdensome interventions into the lives, and bodies, of individuals.

The marriage of global public health with novel digital technologies of surveillance, personal data extraction, information flow, and social control now makes possible novel forms of domination unimaginable in the totalitarian regimes of the past. Whether we agree or disagree with this or that pandemic policy, this broader development should concern each of us.

By now it should be obvious why people who love God, their neighbors, and freedom must resist this trap of tyrannical evil; but how?

Get informed, inform others, stay vigilant, and constantly use your critical thinking skills. Go to <https://stopvaxpassports.org/> for articles, sample emails to send, sign the petition, and watch their webinars—one of which is moderated by Frank Gaffney, entitled "Vaccine Passports: Gateway to Mass Surveillance." Be winsome in your conversations, that you might win some. And we can never over-emphasize the importance of prayer!

As Simple as it Sounds?

By Chris Johnson

In 2008, many Americans were rudely awakened to the news that Russia was in the process of attacking and annexing Georgia. About 30 seconds later, many Americans were awakened to the fact that there was a European country called Georgia.

The average American did not know this. We had no idea that Vladimir Putin might want to claim Georgia or why, and upon hearing, “that’s just what Russians do,” most people carried on with their lives, having seen Sylvester Stallone movies and thus recognizing the veracity of this statement. The Russo-Georgian War lasted a matter of days, and by the following week the world had moved on with, at most, uneasy feelings about the Putin fellow.

In 2014, a Russian assault on Crimea followed the same formula, with little international backlash other than a UN referendum. There were no Crimean or Georgian flags next to profile pictures and no bumper stickers. If it showed up on the evening news, no one felt guilty about using the opportunity to get up and get a drink.

Now, Russia is taking the same action in Ukraine. I want to make something clear here. I have church family native to Ukraine, with relatives still there who they are in communication with and who they are very worried about. I hope not to be misunderstood as cheapening the suffering of Ukrainian refugees and those who are fighting for their homeland. At a church picnic last summer, I listened to the stories of the father who only speaks his native Ukrainian, relayed through his accented daughter, of his parents’ struggle for survival as courageous Christians under the thumb of the Soviet Union. There are strong Christians there, including many whose faith is seasoned by suffering under the old regime of the nation attacking them even now.

But, this is 2022. This is (hopefully) post-Covid, post “Trump-Russia collusion”, post 2020 presidential election, post-Trudeau tyranny etc. In other words, we’ve seen how the cogs in the narrative machine fit together to crank out the allowed opinions, but by now when their product drops in our hands we should know enough to at least ask, “why?”

Why are we being worked into such a froth this time? Again, to be clear - I think we should care about the lives being ended and upended, but why does the narrative machine want us to care? The fact is that not everything fits nicely into the hero-does-good-because-he’s-good/villain-does-bad-because-he’s-bad casting of Zelensky/Putin.

Any conspiracy theories have the same vulnerability as the mainstream narrative: there’s no way of knowing what’s true anymore. Very few people out there are trying to tell the truth; most are trying to sell a narrative, and they all think they’re doing it with everyone’s best interests in mind. Even World Economic Forum (WEF) mastermind Klaus Schwab thinks he’s doing what’s best for humanity.

Have you heard of the WEF, the international organization which coined the phrase, “The Great Reset,” (founder Klaus Schwab literally wrote the book on it) and predicted that within a few decades you’ll “own nothing and be happy?” The WEF started to get attention as Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau flexed his emergency powers against the Canadian trucker protests, because the woman in charge of freezing protestors’ bank accounts was a WEF lackey. As is Justin Trudeau and as is Volodymyr Zelenskyy, who has presented at the infamous Davos conference and received funding from WEF and early in his political career announced Trudeau to be one of the reasons he got into politics.

Another angle that conflicts with the simple good vs. bad narrative is the matter of the U.S. funded Ukrainian biological research facilities, which existence was first denied by our government, before it was admitted that they were funding research, not into bio-weapons, but into defense against bio-weapons. Many around the world have been skeptical of such labs in China, including a predominant theory of such labs as the origin of the Covid-19 virus, and it might be expecting too much for Russia to trust that even a bio-weapons “defense” lab funded by its main geo-political rival, has a completely benign influence on the region, not to mention the threat of further NATO expansion on their borders.

Which brings us to the issue of corruption. An article recently published in TheNationalPulse. details the involvement of one of the avenues of American funding to these biolabs: a firm ostensibly run by Hunter Biden and John Kerry’s stepson, Christopher Heinz. Hunter was also infamously sought out and paid $1 million a year (until 2 months after his father left office of Vice President when it was cut in half) to be on the board of the Ukrainian Oil company, Burisma, despite all lack of experience in the industry. While the Federal investigation into the President’s son’s as-yet-unproven corruption is ongoing, the Ukrainian legal system is a hotbed for such activity. In 2015, TheGuardian.com called it “The most corrupt nation in Europe, explaining that: “Officials from the general prosecutor’s office, who were interviewed by Reuters, claimed that between 2010 and 2014, officials were stealing a fifth of the country’s national output every year. This behaviour has infected all sectors of Ukrainian society.”

Again, no matter how corrupt Ukrainian elite or their president may be, no matter whether Russia had any understandable reasons for concern for their security, the loss of life and livelihoods by the Ukrainian people is a tragedy. We ought to pray for them and support them and care for them!

But when we know that our leaders and their mouthpieces have no moral compass, sadly we cannot assume that their intentions are pure. Pray for safety for Ukrainians, particularly our many Christian brothers and sisters there. Pray also that we would someday be able to trust our own government’s motives again.

Who is Judge Ketanji Brown Jackson?

By Steve Huston

Who doesn't remember the personal attacks and hoop jumping that those nominated by President Trump for the Supreme Court had to endure. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) set the tone for these current hearings for Supreme Court nominee Judge Ketanji Brown Jackson by setting the record straight: "Most of us couldn't go back to our offices during Kavanaugh without getting spit on; hope that doesn't happen to ya'll. I don't think it will. As to the historic nature of your appointment, I understand; but when I get lectured about this from my Democratic colleagues, I remember Janice Rogers Brown, African American woman, that was filibustered by the same people praising you. ... If you're Hispanic or African American conservative it's about your philosophy; now it's going to be about the historic nature of the pick. No, it's going to be about your philosophy. The bottom line here is, it is about philosophy when it's about somebody of color on our side; it's about we're all racist if we ask hard questions. It's not going to fly with us; we're used to it by now. ... Senator Hawley, you need to ask her about her record as a district court judge; you should. I hope you do and we'll see what she says."

Sen. Graham was correct about the Left's attacks on conservative nominees of color; but the Left doesn't stop there. According to Mike Davis of the Article 3 Project, "the Left even viciously attacked Judge Michelle Childs, one of the three finalists for Biden; because they didn't think that she was liberal enough because she had corporate clients one time in private practice. This has nothing to do with race; it has nothing to do with diversity. It's all about Leftists getting power and that's what they're going to get with Judge Jackson because she's a hard-core Leftist and she has been her whole life."

The record of Judge Jackson shows that she has empathy for terrorists who kill Americans and for sex predators of children.

1. "She helped free 729 Gitmo terrorists. Those were the ones held after 9-11 in our war in the Middle East who were the worst of the worst. She freed 729 of them; 229 went back into terrorism. Twelve killed six Americans. That's just one part. She was happy to let them go." (Summarized by Sandy Rios)

Sen. Cornyn (R-TX) stated that while defending a member of the Taliban, Judge Jackson called Secretary of Defense Rumsfeld and then President George W. Bush war criminals in a legal filing. (That has international law implications.) Her response was that she didn't "remember that particular reference" and "did not intend to disparage" either of them. Such a response seems very disingenuous. Accusing a president of a war crime would be quite memorable; and how else could it be meant but disparaging? One should expect a Supreme Court justice to have a better memory and to be honest. SCOTUS must be a group of individuals who fight for the constitutional rights and safety of Americans, not sympathize with terrorists who desire to kill us.

2. Judge Ketanji Brown Jackson has a 25 year history of advocating for lighter punishment for sex predators of children. Sen. Hawley pointed out that Judge Jackson had seven cases on the district court where she had discretion on these child pornography cases. 100% of the time she imposed sentences on these child pornographers significantly below the sentencing guidelines and significantly below what the prosecutors recommended. Sen. Cruz (R-TX) said, "On average Jackson gave 47.2 percent less time behind bars than prosecutors asked for." That's pitiful and should be considered criminal.

With the increased ease of making, sharing, and watching child pornography due to the explosion of internet capabilities around the world and high definition smart phone cameras, children are being raped and exploited at increasing rates, especially in third world countries. With the ever-growing and current developing technology where humans may rely on exoskeletons to have realistic sex in the metaverse, we can be certain that children will be further exploited and such cases will come before the highest court in our land. As these rulings are made, we need the assurance that sentencing will be a deterrent, not a mere slap on the wrist.

Here are a few of the many disturbing moments as U.S. Senators interviewed this nominee who gave no answers, yet in doing so, told us much.

When considering someone for Supreme Court justice it's important to know their judicial philosophy. Both sides of the aisle were left uncertain about how she thinks and approaches and decides cases. It would seem that Judge Jackson is taking a page from Pelosi's book, "we'll have to pass her if we want to know what's in her." But knowing her record and the lack of direct answers throughout the hearing, we have a pretty good idea of what to expect.

She side-stepped several questions regarding abortion but when it came to Roe v Wade she was firm that it is "the settled law of the Supreme Court," with no intention of overturning it.

When it comes to the question of gender, Judge Jackson would neither make any comment on what schools should teach nor was she able to define what a woman is because, "I'm not a biologist." More than just fodder for numerous memes on Facebook, it's disturbing that someone who desires to sit on the highest court of the land can't even "judge" something as simple and straight forward as what is a man or a woman; yet, according to Elle Reynolds of The Federalist, has used the word "woman" 14 times "in just the first two days of her confirmation hearings, plus 34 times...in her legal opinions as a judge."

The Senate could vote on Judge Jackson as early as April 8. Appeal to the high court of Heaven and then call your Senators (202-224-3121) and urge them to vote NO on Judge Jackson. We need someone with American values, who can define the words they use, and won't duck the issues at hand.

Real Healthcare

By Steve Huston

American Decency has recently interviewed online and had an in-person event with Mark Blocher, founder of Christian Healthcare Centers (CHC). We are offering both of these on one DVD, available for you to purchase ($10). Whether you live in Michigan, or elsewhere in the U.S., you'll want to be blessed by hearing about healthcare as it should be.

We need reliable healthcare; healthcare that is consumer based instead of insurance based and healthcare that conscientiously chooses to deal with the whole person—body, mind, and soul. Christian Healthcare Centers does that, making it not only a breath of fresh air but also very necessary.

In this DVD Mark Blocher addresses CHC's alternative to healthcare services that are failing to address patient concerns regarding cost, ethics, and trust. CHC is based in Grand Rapids, Michigan; they are now expanding to Newaygo and have plans to continue growing, making their compassionate and spiritual influence available to those in other areas. Please pray for them.

Don't miss out on this opportunity to learn about such an innovative and commonsense approach to healthcare. Here are just a few of the many questions that one can expect answers to.

- What makes CHC Christian?
- What about emergency situations?
- How do you handle prescriptions?
- What other procedures do you offer as well?

Learn more about this intriguing reform on healthcare. See the enclosed order form.

“Now it’s Time to Say Goodbye”

to D-I-S-N-E-Y

By Lisa Van Houten

“To infinity and beyond!” - that’s how far Disney will go to indoctrinate children. The Walt Disney Company is once again showing that, while they’re happy to rake in billions of dollars entertaining kids, they don’t care a whit about protecting them.

Last month the Florida Legislature passed the Parental Rights in Education bill which prohibits schools from instructing children in kindergarten – 3rd grade on any forms of sexuality, including sexual orientation and gender identity. Polls have shown that a majority of voters support the legislation. Nationwide, when asked whether or not they would support a law similar to Florida’s in their own state, the vast majority said they would - 74% of Republicans, 66% of non-affiliated voters, and even basically half of Democrats – 49%; that also includes majorities of every racial category – 63% of whites, 61% of black voters and 64% of other minorities.

LGBT extremists have been in a frenzy over this commonsense law protecting young children from sexualization, while leftist media engaged in a misinformation campaign, labeling it the “Don’t Say Gay” bill. Protecting the innocence of children was once something we could all agree on, but now the Left will stop at nothing to indoctrinate them. The Biden administration slammed the bill, calling it “horrific” and Disney’s CEO tried to pressure Governor DeSantis to veto the legislation.

DeSantis didn’t bow to the pressure and instead pointed out Disney’s hypocrisy, stating: “When you have companies that have made a fortune off being family-friendly and catering to families and young kids, they should understand that parents of young kids do not want this injected into their kid’s kindergarten classroom. They do not want their first graders to be told they can choose an opposite gender. That is not appropriate for those kids. ... You have companies, like a Disney, that are going to... criticize parents’ rights, they’re going to criticize the fact that we don’t want transgenderism in kindergarten, in first-grade classrooms. If that’s the hill that they’re going to die on, then how do they possibly explain lining their pockets with their relationship from the Communist Party of China? Because that’s what they do, and they make a fortune, and they don’t say a word about the really brutal practices that you see over there at the hands of the CCP. So in Florida, our policies are going to be based on the best interest of Florida citizens, not on the musing of woke corporations.”

After Disney was unsuccessful in their efforts to stop this legislation, the Disney Company retaliated by re-inserting a same-sex kiss into the upcoming animated children’s movie “Lightyear,” based on the popular “Toy Story” movies. The same-sex kiss had originally been cut from the movie, but after Leftist pushback, Disney put it back in with the goal of doing what elementary teachers in Florida are not allowed to do now - brainwash millions of kids with LGBT ideology. As Disney CEO Bob Chapek stated, one of the “more effective ways” to implement change in the culture is through entertainment. This is not new with Disney – they have long used children’s entertainment as a form of propaganda.

Just days after adding the same-sex kiss to “Lightyear,” Disney announced plans to “take action” against Texas Gov. Greg Abbott’s order that categorizes “sex change” procedures in children as child abuse, criminalizing genital mutilation “surgery” on children. Disney also promised company support to fight legislation similar to Florida’s in other states.

One Disney insider anonymously stated: They want to use the company to make an end-run around parents through content creation and political pressure. They see it as their mission to rescue the next generation from their conservative parents.” Disney, whose bread is buttered by American families, wants 5-year-olds to be taught perversion. They’re coming after your children and grandchildren. Is this a company worthy of your support?
